Peter von Becker

Céleste

„In his in a virtuoso manner composed prose Peter von Becker appears as a modern descendant of romanticism.“ Peter Schneider, author

Content

It is amidst the afterpains of the twentieth century that our story takes place, in the year 2013, that harbinger of a new historical turning point and a year in which occurs the baffling abduction of the reclusive bestselling author Jonas Hecker on an island in southern Italy; a year when the world-famous Corsican artist Céleste will experience her last summer on earth; and an equally fateful year for the Berlin photographer Marie Bach and her companion, the philosopher Julius Seelenberg.

At center of the novel, which suspensefully intertwines five stories and extends from Europe to Japan, is the 99-year-old Céleste Salvatori, queen of the art scene who fought in the French Resistance during the Second World War and whose life conceals a mortal secret. En route to the startling and brilliantly conceived finale, we readers experience the ambiguity of human perception as well as the bedazzlements and aberrations that we all undergo – in art, in life, in love.

Bio

Peter von Becker was born in 1947 and lives in Berlin. He was formerly co-editor of the periodical Theater heute, and until 2005 he served as editor of the culture and features section of the Berliner Tagesspiegel. He teaches at the Berlin University of the Arts and continues to write about culture for the Tagesspiegel. Von Becker has authored screenplays, essays, poems and the novel Die Andere Zeit (The Other Times); Céleste is his first work to appear with mare.

“Dear Amundsen – Scott is dead, contact me – Wilson.”

The e-mail that rocks Hanna’s world consists of a single line and reaches the scientist, of all times, in the midst of an important Antarctic expedition from which she expects to gain new insight into the earth and its climatic changes over the ages.

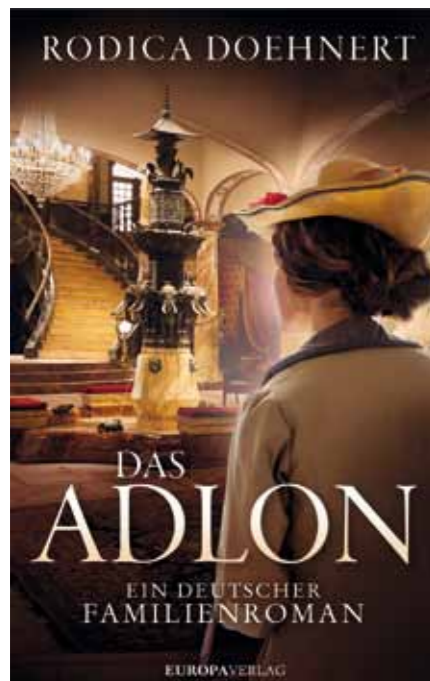

In one fell swoop there returns the memory of her closest friend as a young girl, Fido by name, who without any explanation broke off contact twenty years ago and in doing so betrayed their future plans. Now in the endless icy expanse all those unanswered questions come rushing back and cause Hanna to increasingly lose control. With tensions mounting among the personnel of her small research team and with a snowstorm threatening the success of their project, this South Pole expedition becomes not only a logistical but an emotional challenge.

Bio

Anne von Canal was born in 1973 and received her university degree in Scandinavian and German Studies. She worked ten years in the publishing industry and also as a translator before dedicating herself to her own writing. She makes her home alternately in Hamburg and in a small town on the Moselle River. In 2014 her novel Der Grund was also published by mare and proved a success with both critics and public.

Rodica Doehnert

The Adlon

(OT: Das Adlon – Ein deutscher Familienroman)

After the successful predecessor, The Sacher, now comes The Adlon, a German family novel.

Based on the successful TV drama Das Adlon: 9 million viewers with Josefine Preuß, Heino Ferch and Marie Bäumer; the rights have been sold to 28 countries

Content

Berlin, 1994. Sonja Schadt has spent almost all of her life in the legendary Adlon hotel behind the Brandenburg Gate. She experienced its founding, its golden age, and its collapse. She has protected the spirit of the place. And she has been patiently waiting to solve her family secret. When she finally stands across from her niece, she is 90 years old. Katharina Zimmermann belongs to the team of architects tasked with rebuilding the Adlon. A consequential meeting. Against interior and exterior resistance, the two expose a family lie.

Rodica Doehnert lets a thrilling emotional story come alive before a historic backdrop. As Sonja Schadt tells her niece the story of the legendary hotel, the reader discovers the true drama surrounding Schadt's actual background. With her niece's help, Sonja discovers the curse that prevents the women in their family from being happy. Five strong women and their search for self-determination — a family story that began with a lie and ends with love.

Bio

Rodica Doehnert was born in 1960. She studied directing at the College of Television and Film in Potsdam-Babelsberg and has worked for twenty years as a screenwriter, producing complex, thoughtful screenplays. In both of her novels, Hotel Sacher and The Adlon, she takes the richness of her gripping screenplays about the hotels to a new, literary level.

Isabelle von Fallois

The Magdalena Letter

(OT: Der Brief der Magdalena)

A legacy that will change the world and give it new hope.

More soulful than Dan Brown, more suspenseful than most mystery thrillers.

Content

After famed conductor Jean Chevalier passes away, his daughter Marie starts to recognize that the world is not as it seems. He has left her a golden key that helps unlock a mysterious secret. Marie delves ever-deeper into the mysteries of Richard Wagner's music. Does it contain a secret message, left behind by Jesus's mistress Maria Magdalena?

Marie, and her friend Veronique find themselves in grave danger due to the search: the secret society of the Octavians has been trying for centuries to suppress Magdalena's message, and they don't stop at murder. The two friends don't know who they can trust. Is the vivacious tenor Julien de la Tour dealing with them in good faith? What about the mysterious Lucius? And how about the Russian ballet star Sascha Marakov? The two of them try everything to bring light into the dark and get Magdalena's message out to the public. Their mysterious trip takes them to churches and opera houses in Paris, Vienna, Dresden, Nice, and St. Maximin, over Barcelona, to a breathtaking discovery in a cave in the Pyrenees.

Bio

Isabelle von Fallois was born in Munich and grew up in an artist's household. She studied the concert piano under pianist Arnaldo Cohen and conductor Maestro Sergiu Celibidache. During this time, she also worked with singers and dancers from the world of classical ballet and flamenco. A life-threatening leukemia disorder led von Fallois to deal intensely with supernatural phenomena. She wrote four books, among them the bestseller The Healing Power of Your Angels, translated into many languages. This is the debut novel of an author known for her spiritual books.

(OT: Nordbräute)

The first part of the magnificent Iceland trilogy, enthralling and full of humour, set around Heimat, friendship, family and the alluring power of money. Pure reading delight full of Icelandic flair

'When the northern brides in Anne Siegel's novel make a clean sweep of it, children and grandchildren are stunned. Fast-paced and well written!' Iceland Review

Content

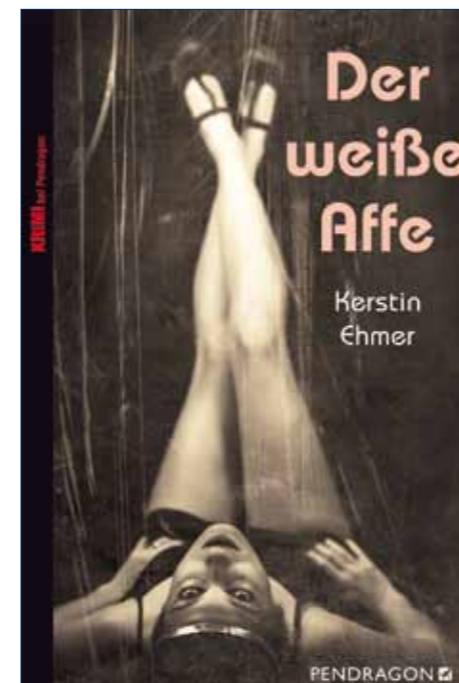

October 2008: While angry masses demonstrate in Reykjavík about the financial plight of their country, elderly Christa finally decides to come clean to her family about her past on the eve of her ninetieth birthday. Telling the truth has not been something that came easy to stubborn Christa, who found herself entangled in a web of lies over the last decades. Therefore, it's no surprise that the old lady's confession throws the entire family into a dither.

Was Christa, who emigrated to Iceland from Germany in 1949 and became one of the richest estate agents on the island, a Nazi sympathiser? And what has Christa's friend Jóhanna, who is of German descent, got to do with it? It is only Christa's grandson Jón, who seems to reach his grandmother's heart in the tumult of the festivities. In the process, he not only uncovers Christa's secret, but also that of Jóhanna and her daughter Léontine, who has just been arrested for redeploying capital to foreign shell companies.

Kerstin Ehmer

The White Monkey

(OT: Der weiße Affe)

Bustling Metropolis

Top Title

Full of verve and striking imagery

Content

The Golden Twenties in Berlin. Young police officer Ariel Spiro just moved from his provincial hometown to the vibrant capital and investigates his first murder case straight away: A Jewish banker was found beaten to death after a rendezvous with his mistress. At first every clue seems to suggest a political motive. Not one to fall for easy conclusions Spiro takes a closer look at the victim's wealthy and eccentric family but little by little the young officer gets caught up in the fast-paced rhythm and glittering nightlife of Berlin. When the fascinating daughter of the deceased seems to take a particular interest in him, it is getting more and more complicated for Spiro to stay levelheaded in order to untangle the obscure web of lies and silence. Bit by bit every layer is unveiled and not everyone is who they pretend to be.

Kerstin Ehmer evokes the Golden Twenties era in Berlin in all its facets. The capital of the Weimar Republic was characterized by opulent bars and sexual freedom as much as antisemitism and the smouldering signs ultimately leading to the rise of the National Socialists.

Bio

Kerstin Ehmer is an experienced travel and portrait photographer. She and her husband run the legendary "Victoria Bar" in Berlin which opened 16 years ago. Kerstin Ehmer is the author of the longseller "The School of Sophisticated Drinking" (Die Schule der Trunkenheit), which has been translated into several languages. "The White Monkey" is her debut novel.

Our Cultural Roots – Art, Mythology, Festivals and Traditions throughout the Year

(OT: Die Wurzeln unserer Kultur – Natur, Kunst, Mythologie, Feste und Bräuche im Jahreslauf)

A literary investigation into the hidden roots of our western culture

Unique contribution to the discussion about “dominant culture”

Opens up the deep symbolism of rituals, traditions and festivals celebrated throughout the year

Content

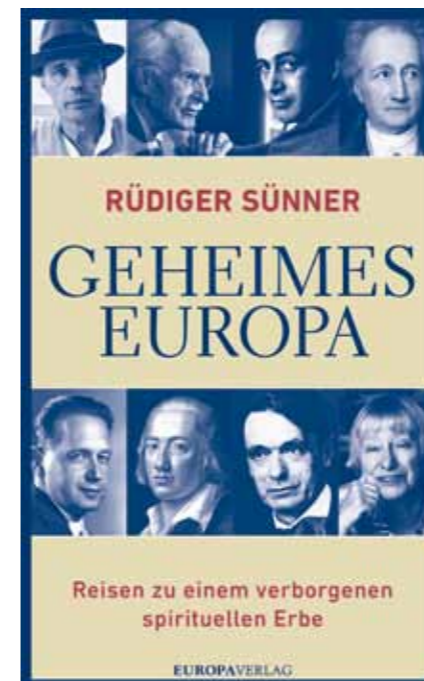

Where Do We Come From? What Are We? Where Are We Going? is the title of a famous painting by Paul Gauguin, who created this work in 1897 when struggling with thoughts of suicide. These are basic human questions. Today, in the face of the unprecedented influx of refugees, Europe is once again asking these same questions. What is our European culture? What roots and traditions form its basis? And what still remains in our current tradition-forgetful society?

Angela Contzen reveals that Europe is an amazingly rich and diverse cultural space. Over the past 2,000 years, it has been shaped by extremely varied spiritual influences: from rabbinical Judaism to Ancient Greek philosophy, from the Roman Empire to Christianity, from ancient mythology to the old Germanic religions. Over the centuries, these influences have shaped our art and the way we organize our years, our philosophy and our knowledge, as well as our value system and our moral standards, our constitutions and our legal frameworks. This opulent book of discovery will open your eyes to the richness of our western traditions and may provide some answers to questions related to our cultural identity.

Bio

Angela C. Contzen, born in 1953, studied literature, philosophy and history. She was employed as an editor for several newspapers and magazines. For more than two decades, she has devoted herself to the study of European culture and western symbolism, primarily with the pictorial world of Judaism, Christianity, Gnosticism, and Kabbalah. She lives with her family in Potsdam.

Rüdiger Sünner

Secret Europe: Journeys into a Hidden Spiritual Legacy

(OT: Geheimes Europa – Reisen zu einem verborgenen spirituellen Erbe)

“Europe is a landscape of the soul, with its own weather, its own light, where its own songs are sung, its own stories are told.” Wim Wenders

Impressive encounters with great writers and thinkers

The special magic of Europe’s landscape of the soul

Content

The filmmaker Rüdiger Sünner has spent the past three decades in search of Europe’s spiritual traditions. In his book, he describes encounters with influential role models and inspirations. He focuses on the spiritual visions of the Romantics, the Nazis’ abuse of mythology, the peace missions of the Swede Dag Hammarskjöld, the deep psychology of Swiss psychologist C.G. Jung, the anthroposophy of the Austrian Rudolf Steiner, the “mystic” Dorothee Soelle, the “shaman” Joseph Beuys, and the Romanian-born poet Paul Celan. Mysticism and mythology, the traditions of Gnosticism, Kabbalah, alchemy, the world of the Celts and the Teutons, and the legends around the Holy Grail. Sünner’s book circles the periphery of a “Secret Europe”, whose margins lie outside the borders of the cultural and religious mainstream.

The impulses rising out of this could also function as building blocks for a future Europe that could be more than just an economic federation. It could be a special landscape of the soul.

Bio

Rüdiger Sünner, born in 1953, studied music, German and philosophy, in addition to the time he spent at the German Film and Television Academy in Berlin. His diverse publications and films focus primarily on conceptual border zones, such as Black Sun – The Mythological Background of National Socialism (1997) or Show Your Wounds – The Art and Spirituality of Joseph Beuys (Europa Verlag, 2015).

Wolfgang Niess

The 1918-19 Revolution: The Beginning of Democracy in Germany

(OT: Die Revolution von 1918/19 – Der wahre Beginn unserer Demokratie)

"The greatest of all revolutions." Theodor Wolff, Berliner Tageblatt, November 1918

100 years ago: the first successful revolution in Germany rings in democracy

Content

The rebellion begins with the German High Seas Fleet, as sailors refuse to engage in one final battle against the British Royal Navy although Germany had already capitulated. Over the next few days, the revolt spreads throughout the entire German Reich, finally reaching Berlin 1918. Thousands of workers protest, the garrisons join in, the Reichskanzler announces the Kaiser's abdication, the monarchy collapses, the Republic is heralded.

The goal of the revolutionary movement is to abolish all traces of Prussian militarism and imperialism from the government, and to build, from the ground up, a democratic society. Ultimately, the fear of a Bolshevik revolution prevents the available space from being leveraged for a full eradication of the established structures. Nonetheless, the first democracy in Germany is successfully founded.

Vividly and knowledgeably, Wolfgang Niess depicts the peaceful and successful revolution that gave rise to the first German republic. Furthermore, he explains why the revolution has been largely misunderstood, exploited or even forgotten. The time is ripe for it to be duly celebrated as the greatest and most successful mass movement in Germany's history.

Bio

Dr. Wolfgang Niess, born in 1952, studied history and political science in Stuttgart and Tübingen. He has written numerous radio and television programs, essays and books related to various aspects of modern history. Niess is the managing editor for SWR Television, developed and has been presenting the event series "Author in Conversation," hosting renowned historians, such as Ian Kershaw, Christopher Clark and Joachim Fest.

Bärbel Wardetzki

Narcissism, Seduction and Power in Politics and Society

(OT: Narzissmus, Verführung und Macht in Politik und Gesellschaft)

The bestselling author and narcissism expert on the dangerous combination of power and narcissism

The reasons why so many narcissistic people end up in leadership positions and what we can do to stand up to them

Content

In an age in which we are confronted with a wide swing to the right and an increasing number of autocratic leaders, many people are wondering why narcissists are making such strong inroads.

What makes these people so attractive that they are frequently able to work themselves into positions of power? Bärbel Wardetzki analyzes how exactly they seduce us - and what we get out of it.

Narcissistic leaders have a particularly high degree of intersection with times of crisis. They gain popularity through simplistic solutions, convincing people that only they can set things right again and save a country, an organization, or a company. Their motto: "I am the best to correct and solve everything my predecessors screwed up." The problem is, though, that the initial promises are only rarely kept, and in the end, we are left standing with empty hands. The renowned psychotherapist Bärbel Wardetzki seeks to sharpen our understanding of the "post-truth" handling of the so-called "perceived truth," as is typical for narcissists. She shows us why we can only be immune to these individuals when we understand what we really hope to get from them and which narcissistic needs within ourselves they are fulfilling.

Bio

Bärbel Wardetzki, born in 1952, holds a Ph.D. in psychology. She lives in Munich, where she works as a psychotherapist, supervisor and coach. She is also the author of several successful books about narcissism, psychological problems, and eating disorders and widely known for her regular radio and television presence.

On a Secret Mission – What Counter Terrorist Units experience in the fight against Crime and Terrorism

(OT: In geheimer Mission – Was Polizeispezialeinheiten im Kampf gegen Verbrechen und Terror erleben)

An intimate look at a closed world. First-hand insight into the world of active Counter-Terrorist Units and the courageous men and women behind, who fight every day against terrorism and crime to guarantee with their own lives the security of the citizens.

Content

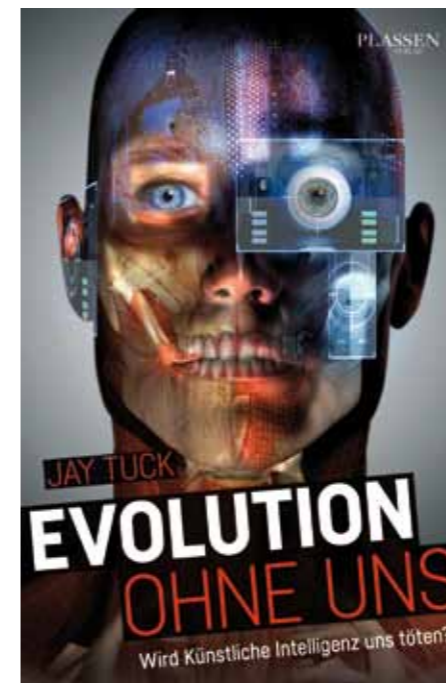

The German GSG9, the Austrian EKO-Cobra, the British SC&O 19, the French RAID, the US-SWAT-Teams – these elite police units deal with kidnappings, armed operations against organized crime and terrorism. They meet regularly to exchange their various experiences. Judith Grohmann is the first outsider ever allowed to access this fraternity. She reports exclusively from the secret world of 16 worldwide active elite police units, which led her to the USA, Russia, Jordan, Israel and to several countries throughout Europe. In this book, Judith describes not only the most dangerous operations, she gives also an introduction to the selection process, the formation and the psychological training of these elite fighters. How do they go along with every use of their physical and mental limits and how do they deal with traumatic experiences? The author collected exciting and moving reports of the members of the units from various interventions over the past decade, including e.g. recent attacks like the Charlie Hebdo case. Country-specific and current amendments by the author are possible.

Bio

Judith Grohmann is an Austrian investigative journalist and author. She is an alumni of the Private School Lycée Français de Vienne and graduated from the University of Vienna in Political Science, Journalism and Japanese Studies. As managing editor and journalist, Judith has been working for Austrian magazines like profil, Der Standard or Die Presse as well as Foreign Correspondent from Austria for Münchener Merkur.

Evolution without us. Will Artificial Intelligence kill us?

(OT: Evolution ohne uns. Wird Künstliche Intelligenz uns töten?)

“Artificial Intelligence is not a science fiction fantasy or the Power-Point dream of some startup kid. It is here, now, and changing our world at breathtaking speed. We – as individuals and as institutions – must be prepared to redefine ourselves constantly. But when will AI surpass us? It already has – in many sections of our society.

Content

From airline tickets to agricultural fertilizers, AI can help us digest big data, macromanage global resources, define unseen challenges and secure our food chain, our environment and a sustainable future. In the industrial world of 4.0, billions of global indicators can be analysed in microseconds.

Today, it is no longer just menial muscle and sweat jobs that are threatened. We are relinquishing highly skilled positions in our society to intelligent computers. Slowly, steadily, we are passing control in top management and marketing, in high finance and federal government, in medical research and military combat to the superior cognitive capabilities of Artificial Intelligence. While the advantages are enormous, many of the greatest thinkers in Silicon Valley believe will soon threaten human existence.

„I don't understand why more people aren't worried“, says Microsoft founder Bill Gates.

If we turn over too much responsibility too soon, we can lose control to a super intelligence which is learning at lightning speed. There is no guarantee that we will always be Darwin's Darling.

Karl Wetzig

My Iceland

(OT: Mein Island)

Part of the Successful mare Series "My Island"

Content

This story of Iceland begins under palm trees in a fortress with a view to the Indian Ocean.

In the seventeenth century this is where the Icelander Jón Ólafsson cast up, later recording his memories of the Orient in vibrant and luminous colors. Using this early testimony of Icelandic wanderlust and urge for discovery as his springboard, Karl Wetzig tells the story of this island hard on the Arctic Circle and in so doing plumbs the famous Icelandic sagas while also drawing upon his own rich personal experience of years spent in the island nation. He relates the peculiarities of the Icelandic language, Reykjavík's drinking and bar culture, hikes over craggy lava fields, and icy New Year's dips in snowy river landscapes. Wetzig's perspective on Iceland and its rugged topography is informed by a great love and knowledge of the island, and readers who tag along will do so with seeing eyes and off the well beaten paths to discover new and rewarding sights.

Bio

Karl Wetzig was born in 1956 in Düsseldorf. He pursued his studies in Bonn and Uppsala and from 1992 to 1998 was a lecturer at Reykjavík University. He is the author of numerous travel books, and under his complete name Karl-Ludwig Wetzig he has carved out a reputation as a fine translator of Nordic languages. Harro Harring

(OT: Harro Harring – Rebell der Freiheit)

The first and only biography of the forgotten rebel, freedom fighter, poet and painter

150 years before the foundation of the EU, he was campaigning for a united Europe

Meet the tragic hero of political romanticism, the "unknown poet" of the 19th century and a rediscovery of the first order.

Content

Born in 1798 close to Husum, Harro Harring was a dike reeve's son who ventured out into the world to learn to paint. In 1821, he travelled to Greece to fight for Greece's independence against the Turks. After the November Insurrection of 1830 in Warsaw, he wrote a revealing account of Poland under Russian rule, which became an instant best-seller, despite being immediately banned. His songs were sung at Hambach Castle in 1832. Harring was a member of "Young Europe", a secret society that, in 1834, under the leadership of Giuseppe Mazzini called for a united Europe without borders and he was persecuted by Metternich's agents. He fled to England, Heligoland and Brazil, met Edgar Allen Poe and Margaret Fuller in New York and, in 1848, tried in vain to awaken the Frisians to fight for freedom. Harring, the novelist and poet, was arrested for his actions over twenty times and was well-known as a fierce rebel. However, he ran aground just like the revolution itself. Harring was a visionary yet he died, poor and forgotten, by his own hand in 1870. This gripping biography condenses Harring's life story into a master narrative of the tumultuous German Vormärz period.

Bio

Peter Mathews, born 1951 in Bremerhaven, has been researching Harring for over twenty years. After studying economics, Mathews worked as a publisher, promoter and publicist for several large publishing houses. As an author and ghost writer, he has written over a dozen novels, crime thrillers, non-fiction books and screenplays, including Die Wahrheit hinter der Wahrheit. Die Goldfine Akten with Yitzhak Goldfine (Europa Verlag).

The Names of the Numbers. How it worked to identify the 86 victims of a Nazi-crime

(OT: Die Namen der Nummern. Wie es gelang, die 86 Opfer eines NS-Verbrechens zu identifizieren)

How can we keep the memories of those who lost their lives in Nazi crimes?

In giving them back their identity, like 86 Jewish victims, who are followed until their last station.

Content

German anatomical institutes always had problems obtaining sufficient cadavers for research and training. In the NS period, universities could count on “extraordinary opportunities for cadaver delivery”. Mostly tacitly, many bodies were those of victims of NS crimes. Scientists exploited the exceptional political situation to systematically supplement their institutional collections. Their endeavors to fill the “lamentable gaps” took on truly bizarre forms. In Austria, Jewish cemeteries were plundered for racial-political expansion of anatomical collections. A change in paradigm followed: intentional murder for the benefit of NS-oriented science. In December 1942, anatomists discussed plans for “material acquisition”. August Hirt, director of the anatomical institute at the Reichsuniversität Strasbourg, was to develop guidelines under the name „Ahnenerbe“. The university was considered a center of excellence for Nazi ideology. The anthropologists Bruno Beger and Hans Fleischhacker selected 86 Jewish prisoners in Auschwitz in June 1943 and deported them to the concentration camp at Struthof near Natzweiler, where they were murdered. The bodies were delivered to the anatomy department in Strasbourg for preparation and used as anatomical specimens. For modern scientists, the elucidation of these criminal acts is not exhausted in the search for an answer to the questions of perpetrator, place, modus operandi or motive.

The Women of Block 10. Medical Research in Auschwitz

(OT: Die Frauen von Block 10. Medizinische Versuche in Auschwitz)

A moral portrait of Block 10 in Auschwitz where Nazi doctors used Jewish women as subjects for cruel and barbaric experiments.

Content

Numerous publications have been written regarding Block 10. But Lang adds another dimension by following some of the young women, all Jewish, from their arrival at the ramp where they were chosen to become the subjects of sterilization experiments. Most of them had been deported from Greece, Belgium, the Netherlands and France. The women were brought to a building which looked somewhat like a hospital though they were young and healthy. Their confusion soon turned to despair and terror as they realized that they were there to be tortured by brutal, inhumane procedures.

Lang also paints a moral portrait of the nurses and prisoner-doctors in Block 10, using survivors’ testimonies. Most of the nurses had no medical training. Some would even hit the women who screamed with pain. The exact number of women who were experimented on in Block 10 remains unknown. It is probably around 800. Similarly, the number of deaths due to the experiments carried out there cannot be determined. Many survivors who had been experimented on were later unable to have children.

Claude Romney Lewin (University Calgary): „A very important piece of research which deals with a particularly dark and revolting aspect of the Auschwitz history. Moreover, in light of the recent apology issued by the German Medical Association (Bundesärztekammer) to the victims of the crimes perpetrated by Nazi doctors as well as to their families, the book deserves to be widely read.“

Do You Understand Schulz?

(OT: Verstehen Sie Schulz – Wie der mächtigste Mann der SPD wurde, was er ist)

A one-of-a-kind portrait of Schulz's personal history and how he has managed to become what he is.

"[...] Martin Häusler's detailed research focuses on the personality and political motivations of SPD chancellor candidate Schulz. Schulz's relationship with his siblings plays an influential role in this context." Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung Online

Content

Not everyone gets a shot at being a chancellor candidate – a person is shaped for that position. This is also the case for Martin Schulz. It is his extremely diverse strengths that have transformed Schulz into the political strategist whom SPD members and an increasing number of voters believe can defeat Angela Merkel. In order to objectively analyze these strengths, journalist Martin Häusler engaged Martin Schulz in extensive conversations, interviewed colleagues of his from various professional and personal spheres, and placed his findings under the proverbial microscope. How did Schulz become so power conscious? What sparked his political creative drive? What is the source of his verbal brilliance? Who set his foundational values? Which experiences shaped the upbringing of the youngest of five siblings, and from what did he draw the unconditional discipline that allowed him to defeat his alcoholism? What inspired him to become such a devoted advocate for Europe? And would all of this be enough to turn him into a good chancellor for the entire German nation? These questions can only be answered by taking a close look at his years growing up in the Aachen border area, the volatile history of the Schulz family, and the memories of his friends, supporters and critics.

Bio

Martin Häusler, born in 1974, wrote his first article for the Rheinische Post. After completing degrees in public relations, geography and sociology, he worked as a reporter, columnist and department chief for Gruner + Jahr and Axel Springer. Today, he works as a freelance writer with a concentration on social, political and ecological subjects.

Dr. Markus Baumgartner

Your Body Loves Boring: A Plea for Healthy Common Sense

(OT: Dein Körper ist ein Spießer – Ein Plädoyer für gesunden Menschenverstand)

Interesting case studies and stories from Dr. Baumgartner's day-to-day practice

Easily understandable information about our health

Content

"Did you know that your body loves boring?" With sentences like this, the Munich general practitioner Dr. Markus Baumgartner explains to his patients that they should not be surprised when their bodies begin to show negative symptoms, considering that we subject them to constant stress, irregular sleeping and eating routines, and inadequate relaxation. This sentence is typical for the empathic doctor, who, more than anything, wants his patients to understand why their bodies act up when they lose their body-soul-mind equilibrium. This trained doctor describes his transformation from a surgeon to a general practitioner and doctor for acupuncture: "From Saul to Paul."

This is not a textbook focused on any specific healing approach, even though Dr. Baumgartner frequently references traditional Chinese medicine and yoga principles. He uses these as an easily comprehensible, explanatory model. The text concentrates much more on his day-to-day practice, and his patients' ordinary and not-so-ordinary symptoms and concerns. These true stories, linked to his personal insights into a doctor's thought process, will help readers to understand that what is often required is the utilization of healthy – in the truest sense of the word – common sense.

Bio

Dr. Markus Baumgartner, born 1968, studied medicine between 1989 and 1996 in Munich, New York, Paris, and Florence. Since establishing himself as a specialist for general medicine in Munich Bogenhausen in 2003, he has further developed himself as a doctor for natural medicine, acupuncture, chirotherapy, osteopathy, emergency health care, and psychosomatics.

The quiet enemy in my body – How chronic infections make us ill, and what we can do about it
With foreword by Prof. Dr. Dr. Christian Schubert
(OT: Der stille Feind in meinem Körper. Wie chronische Entzündungen uns krank machen und was wir dagegen tun können)

Trendsetting topic – psychoneuroendocrinology

Hidden infections: Danger for body and psyche

Why an ‚infected brain‘ is so much at risk

Improve resistance to infection with easy everyday activities and targeted sport

Content

Infections are widespread: heartburn, arthritis, infections after injuries or of the gums, to mention just a few. Many people are unaware that lack of movement and sleep, malnutrition and chronic stress, also trigger infection processes that can have far-reaching health implications. They cause long-term illness not only for our bodies but also for our psyche.

For a long time we have known that infections can cause diabetes, heart diseases and other serious illnesses. That they also affect the brain and our behaviour, has only recently been discovered. An ‚infected‘ brain makes us unmotivated and often leads to social withdrawal.

With this book the reader learns how one can counteract infections of the body, through moderate lifestyle changes. That includes anti-infection strategies, which tailor physical activity, nutrition and sleep, as well as effective stress management.

Bio

Dr. Karsten Krüger, born in 1977, former performance athlete, studied biology and sport science. He is the academic advisor at the Institute for Sport Medicine at the University of Giessen, and since April 2017 Professor for Sport and Health at Leibnitz University, Hannover.

Susanne Noll

Upright and flexible – Stay nimble and pain-free with healthy fascia

(OT: Aufrecht und geschmeidig – Mit gesunden Faszi- en beweglich und schmerzfrei bleiben)

Pain-free and mobile with healthy fascia

Say goodbye to backaches and neck problems with targeted fascia exercise

With many everyday tips and simple Rolfing exercises

Introduction by ‚Fascia Pope‘ Dr. Robert Schleip

Content

Today’s way of life often means we are no longer at home in our own bodies. Through lack of movement, bad posture and one-sided stress on our bodies, the health of our fascia suffers. The far-reaching consequences: stiffness, chronic tensions, pain in the back, shoulders and neck. Orthodox medicine offers little lasting help.

The experienced Rolfing therapist, Susanne Noll, shows readers a daily and effective way – through new body awareness and healthy fascia – to regain a relaxed upright posture and increased mobility. The root causes of many complaints will thereby be removed. And at the same time, a supple upright posture will positively affect the psyche.

Bio

Susanne Noll is a certified Rolfing® therapist with her own practice in Munich. She discovered Yoga and Rolfing due to her own physical complaints. Today she enjoys helping others to be rid of reduced mobility and pain.

Because it's good for my health, I've decided to be happy – ‚Wonder Elixirs‘ for happiness, health and wellbeing

(OT: Da es förderlich für die Gesundheit ist, habe ich beschlossen, glücklich zu sein)

Content

In our efforts to stay healthy we resort too often to expensive and over-strenuous remedies. We torture ourselves with diets or in the fitness studio, give up on our simple indulgences, or put our hope in the next superfood. There are however many more natural, and significantly more effective, ways to lead a long and fulfilling life.

Dr. Michael Handel, an expert on nutrition, motivation and psychology, reveals his formula for success: easily understood guidance and surprising findings demonstrating how we can strengthen the interaction between mental wellbeing and bodily health, in the most agreeable way.

A completely new look at what really helps us, and at the same time a highly sympathetic guide for all who ultimately want to do what's right, without taking the fun out of life.

Bio

Dr. Michael Handel obtained his doctorate in economics and has studied sociology, psychology, motivation and nutritional science. His business consultancy, Dr. Handel Consulting, has advised boards, managers and teams from successful companies for 30 years. He lives in Stuttgart and Alicante (Spain).

Love, or the courage of dedicating myself rather than sacrificing myself

(OT: Liebe oder der Mut, mich hinzugeben, statt mich herzugeben)

The new book from Spiegel-Bestseller author Janice Jakait

A call for dedication

Moving and honest, unsparing and poetic

Content

Does it exist, the love that changes everything?

“Most of us hope that we can also find real love, that the passion that changes everything, is waiting out there somewhere. But we are the only one who can achieve change. Only when we grow to be that person, whom we ourselves can love and who ‚satisfies‘ us, real love will find us in the form of another human being.”

Nothing is more written about than the immeasurable wonder of love – and nothing hurts us more than when a relationship, that began so full of hope, falls apart.

Janice Jakait knows only too well, how it feels: the constant looking and dating, toxic relationships and deepest loneliness, soaring infatuation and complete desperation. But then a sense and a chance reveal themselves in all the wrong paths, crises and disappointments, and that's when she begins to grow to be the person who she herself would like to meet. She says goodbye to false expectations and ideas about love, she faces up to her deep desires and fears, learns to say ‚No‘ to casual relationships and to complete intellectualising. And then love suddenly stands before her ...

Bio

Janice Jakait, born in 1977, lives in Heidelberg. In both her bestsellers „Roaring Silence“ and „Be happy, not too late“ and in more than 100 interviews and seminars she has reported on her journey to her real self – alone in a rowing boat, for months on an ocean, and then, back on land through the depths of her soul. In her third book she now tells of her greatest adventure in life: to find love – because every kind of happiness is only real, if it is shared. www.jakait.com

(OT: Wenn das Leben um Hilfe ruft – Angehörige zwischen Hingabe, Pflichtgefühl und Verzweiflung)

It is time to take relatives into consideration!

To care for and be cared for: the dynamics of human relations in case everything changes

Emotional and social support

Content

What to do when Mr Alzheimer moves in to the relationship and suddenly there are three who live in the same house? Is the daughter-in-law responsible when the mother with dementia has to be looked after? Is it okay to divorce if one's partner changes into a different person, as a result of a serious illness? From the first to the last breath, life is reliant on contact, love, help and care. Every one of us is, to some extent, committed to lifelong caring. If, however, illness, disability, frailty or dementia become part of everyday life, partners are left unconsidered, with an enormous load – overstretched, overlooked and left alone. The renowned health scientist Annelie Keil gives them a voice. Distinctively and unflinchingly, she discusses questions that a growing number of people on the edge of despair are asking.

Bio

Prof. Dr. Annelie Keil, social- and health scientist, is since 2004 the emeritus Professor and former Deacon of the University of Bremen. The main areas of her work are health science and psychosomatic illness research, biographic and life-world research, as well as working with people in life-crisis, the seriously ill and the dying. She is the co-founder and head of the scientific advanced study 'Palliative Care' at the University of Bremen and board member of the private Cardiovascular Clinic 'Lauterbacher Muhle'.

(OT: Lebe deine weibliche Kraft – Das große Praxisbuch für Schönheit, Heilung und Spiritualität)

Beautiful, strong and sensual with Lumira

Secret Russian knowledge of the strength of true femininity

How women realise their full creative potential

Best-selling author with regular seminar programs

Content

A woman has nine times the creative power of a man! But few modern women fulfil their true potential. Most of them feel directionless and separated from their femininity, entangled in contradictions between feminine instincts and society's demands. Lumira shows in her new book: A woman's element is water, and her being is constantly flowing. Intuition is therefore her most important tool, to unlock her true energy and become healthy. Based on many practical exercises and instructions, Lumira helps all women to find their way back to their original authentic strength and to live their femininity in every sense: confident, strong and loving.

Bio

Lumira grew up in Kazakstan and the Ukraine and came to Germany as a young woman. Here she further developed the Russian-Shamanic healing practice (she learned these techniques since she was a child) with the help of meditation, reincarnation therapy and kinesiology, into a method for complete wellbeing and personal development.

The opening of the third eye – Quantum philosophy and the afterworld module

(OT: Die Öffnung des 3. Auges. Quantenphilosophie unseres Jenseits-Moduls)

The new Warnke: The next quantum philosophy bestseller

How we can connect to the knowledge of the universe

The „opening of the third eye“ corresponds to an intensive activation of the pineal gland

Interdisciplinary knowledge from quantum philosophy, neurotheology, brain research and biology

Content

Latest research verifies that exceptional intuition, near-death experiences or states of enlightenment have a clear biological basis. In the process particular body substances in the pineal gland are released – exactly at that point in the body which the old ‚wisdom traditions‘ and so-called secret societies call the ‚third eye‘.

Ulrich Warnke, well-known interdisciplinary scientist and bestselling author, shows how it is possible to bring about the opening of the third eye and how one can deliberately practise to access the resulting information. The book describes in detail all aspects of the previously secret method, which in practice can be applied by anybody. With the help of sound sequences on the enclosed CD, activation of the pineal gland will be decisively assisted.

Bio

Dr. rer. nat. Ulrich Warnke studied biology, physics, geography and the theory of teaching. As a university lecturer he had teaching assignments for biomedicine, biophysics, environmental medicine, physiological psychology and psychosomatics, preventive biology and bionics. Since 1969 he has headed the working group ‚Technical Biomedicine‘. Warnke was the academic counsellor at the University of Saarland up to March 2010. He is a founding member of the Society for Technical Biology and Bionics e.V. as well as a popular consultant and seminar speaker.

His book The hidden Life of Trees is translated in more than 30 languages

Crane Flight and Floral Clock

Observing, Understanding and Using Phenomena of Nature in the Garden

(OT: Kranichflug und Blumenuhr. Naturphänomene im Garten beobachten, verstehen und nutzen)

Expeditions into nature begin right outside our front door. Thousands of small and large processes occur here that are fascinating and revealing – if you should notice them. In his book, Peter Wohlleben invites the reader to train their senses in order to observe the signals sent out by the winds, clouds, plants and animals.

160 pages, Pala Verlag, published: 2012, English sample translation available, translation rights sold to: France, Italy, Taiwan and UK

Understanding Trees

What Trees Tell Us, and How We Should Care for Them Naturally

(OT: Bäume verstehen. Was uns Bäume erzählen, wie wir sie naturgemäß pflegen)

Peter Wohlleben invites the reader to participate in a very special language course. He demonstrates very impressively: Trees only seemingly stand still and silent in our gardens. Beech, apple and co. not only communicate with one another, but also with us – if we learn their language.

200 pages, Pala Verlag, published: 2011, English sample translation available, translation rights sold to: Czech Republic, France, Italy and Taiwan

Feelings of Animals (OT: Die Gefühle der Tiere)

Clear empathic and humorous: Peter Wohlleben's pleading for a good and fair contact to animals shows with how many prejudices we see our pets. Do they really like their mistress? Or is this just a big misunderstanding – and they need to? The must have book for every animal lover.

160 pages, Pala Verlag, published: October 2014, English sample translation available, translation rights sold to: Italy

Traces of Men in the Forest (OT: Menschenspuren im Wald)

A forest guide of another kind. Beneath many guides to animal marks we learn how to see how human beings influence and change our forests. We learn how to interpret marks and tracks in the forest and we are able to see the difference between an original forest and a cultivated forest. Fascinating and full of proposals of solutions.
